Sonoma County ACEs Connection received a grant from the Health Federation of Philadelphia to establish the Master Trainer program.

Project Background and Summary:

This remarkable program is unique to Sonoma County California, and provides community members with the opportunity to engage in a 9-month training program through classes sponsored by a Coordinating Committee including the County of Sonoma Human and Health Services Departments, Child Parent Institute, Hanna Boys Center, First 5 Sonoma County, Upstream Investments Sonoma County, and the Sonoma County ACEs Connection. In its first year, 2016-2017, the program aims to engage 25 individuals representing a range of sectors who will become certified ACE Interface Master Trainers. Some of these certified trainers may go on to train a second cohort in 2017-2018.

The Adverse Childhood Experiences (ACEs) & Resiliency Fellowship is a 9-month intensive interdisciplinary program designed for community members who will serve as community educators on the topics of toxic stress, trauma, Adverse Childhood Experiences, or Adverse Community Experiences. The group will meet in Santa Rosa, CA for one training session per month. The initial ACE Interface training will span two days, and then will be followed by Community of Practice meetings which will further exploring related topics. Community of Practice sessions will typically be 2-3 hours long and offered weekdays during business hours.

Fellowship Goals and Objectives:

1. Train one cohort of 25 Master Trainers using a train-the-trainer model in the science and biology behind Adverse Childhood Experiences and Resiliency. A team of Master Trainers will then train a second cohort of 25 Presenters.
2. Create a Speakers' Bureau linking Master Trainers with county staff and community partners to increase the awareness of ACEs and Resiliency models.
3. Increase community awareness about the prevalence of ACEs and the public health impacts.
4. Increase community awareness about resources and evidenced-based approaches for building resiliency.
5. Conduct between 50—100 community trainings in 18 months engaging 1,000 participants.

Coordinating Committee:

Representatives from the County of Sonoma Human and Health Services Departments, Child Parent Institute, Hanna Boys Center, First 5 Sonoma County, Upstream Investments Sonoma County, and the Sonoma County ACEs Connection will oversee the fellowship program. These representatives will coordinate the trainings, attend trainings to monitor participation, facilitate Community of Practice activities, serve as assessors of participant ability, and certify participants as various levels of Master Trainers.

ACE Interface Program:

The ACE Interface Train the Master Trainer Program is designed to support rapid dissemination of accurate information that promotes understanding of how developmental adversity affects health and wellbeing throughout the life course. The materials include education about the ACE Study findings, the biology of adversity including neuroscience and epigenetics that tell us why ACEs are so powerful. The ACE Interface

ACE Interface Program Continued:

Train the Master Trainer Program puts accurate science together with an elegant script and fabulous visuals. The Program then addresses strategies for promoting resilience, recovery, and Self-Healing Communities. Program design is informed by adult education and social movement theory, scientific discovery, and audience feedback.

The purpose of the two-day education event with Dr. Robert Anda and Laura Porter is to:

- Increase knowledge and improve the skills of participants related to the biological, health, and social impacts of Adverse Childhood Experience as well as the promise of prevention and collective action to enhance accommodation and resilience.
- Prepare participants to deliver presentations that inspire, engage, and motivate powerful action by diverse audiences, and train other people to do the same.
- Lay the groundwork for a Community of Practice among ACE Interface Master Trainer/Coaches that helps all Trainer/Coaches to continuously improve education and to realize important core values in the work, including the values of transformational improvement and respect for the wisdom of every human being.

Community of Practice Meetings:

Community of Practice meetings will be scheduled once monthly (with a break in December) for several months following the ACE Interface training. These meetings will allow cohort members to practice skills, such as leading adult learning activities for other cohort members. In addition, meetings will engage local experts with in-depth content knowledge of the topics presented in the ACE Interface training. Local experts will help cohort members deepen understanding of the specific biological, health, and social impacts of Adverse Childhood Experience as well as specific strategies showing promise to help prevent or heal ACEs while building resiliency. Sample presenters may include Brian Farragher on the topic of Trauma-Informed Agencies or Jane Stevens on emerging Resiliency strategies across the nation.

ACE Interface Master Trainer Certification:

Twenty five (25) people are initially trained and certified as Master Trainer. The process toward certification includes the following steps:

- Completion of the two-day ACE Interface Training with Dr. Anda and Laura Porter.
- Debrief and recommitment.
- Participation in the monthly Community of Practice sessions.
- Commitment and fulfillment of one speaking engagement* in the first two months post-training.
- Commitment to speaking engagements* (some with facilitated dialogue and coaching) with evaluation and feedback over a 18 month period.

 Speaking engagements will be conducted in pairs or groups of Cohort or Coordinating Committee members.*

Sonoma County ACEs Connection received a grant from the Health Federation of Philadelphia to establish the Master Trainer program.

ACEs & Resiliency Fellowship

ACE Interface Master Trainer Certification (Continued):

Master Trainers may volunteer to help facilitate the training of a second cohort of certified ACE Interface trainers. Engaging a second cohort depends on securing the commitment of at least two (2) Master Trainers from the first cohort to facilitate a two-day training.

Certification will be granted in none or up to all four categories below:

Presenters	Master Trainers	Community Resilience Coaches	Technical Experts
These individuals limit their work to: inform their own work as well as present to audiences using only a short version of the ACE Interface presentation.	These individuals have shown that they have the ability to not only present this information at any level, but have the skills and abilities to train others and monitor their success.	These individuals are certified Presenters and Master Trainers, and have shown that they have the skills and abilities to facilitate safe, nurturing and supportive dialogue with the community about taking action on this information.	These individuals may or may not be certified in some or all of the previous categories; however they serve as technical experts in specific areas: For example: Historical Trauma, Cultural Respect, Public Education, Art of Hosting, Substance Use Disorders, Children’s Mental Health, Domestic Violence, Fetal Alcohol Spectrum Disorder, Early Childhood Development, Community Organizing, Strategic Planning, etc.

Certification is determined through evaluating competency and exploring mutual interest in next steps. Certification is conducted through a careful assessment process and respectful consideration of the best fit for each individual.

Potential Continuing Education Units

The 2016-2017 Fellowship year marks the start of the program. Sonoma County Departments of Health and Human Services plan to apply for continuing education units through the UC Davis Office of Extended Education, the Board of Registered Nurses, and Board of Behavioral Sciences, and will provide further details about any potential credits once approved by respective agencies.
